WHAT TO PLANT.

The Best Fruit for Your Orchards.

Varieties That Thrive Best in This Valley.

I would like to give a few facts regarding the profits of orange culture, which is now conceded to be the most profitable. In Riverside valley, now the most fully developed orange section, I most fully developed orange of varieties, Chollar.

found that from choice stock of varieties, Crocker.

Consolidated California and Virginia. years the net profit was $250 per acre, on the Navels, $300; at six years, $350; at seven years, $450, and at ten years as high as $1000. These figures show the possibilities in orange culture, but are not the average. They show the result of the most intelligent and careful study and the most diligent labor. A report made to the San Bernardino Horticultural Society, on the product of seventeen orange groves, show a net product of $455 per acre. George H. Frost, of Riverside, from a five-acre orchard of 6-year-old trees received $4125, or $825 per acre. C. A. White, of Pomona, said that he sold from nine acres of Navels 2000 boxes of oranges, at $2.25 per box, making $4500, or at the rate of $500 per acre.

These orchards were all fertilized and the average cost of cultivating, irrigating and fertilizing is $41 per acre. The cost of these lands is from $300 to $500 per Vineyard and Orchard Company. Willcox and Globe Stage acre, unimproved with water rights, and the cost of water from $5 to $7 per acre per annum, the original water right costing $100 per inch.

"We have now gone over the ground covering the profits of fruit growing in California. We must discuss the meas-California. We must discuss the measures that will advance the interests of the fruit growers here; some of these are lower freights, better rail connections, canneries, dryers—packing houses—aid for the Chamber of Commerce, and the Fruit Growers' Association. 1 have seen some wonderful exhibits in the Chambers of Commerce of San Diego, Los Angeles and other places. They have been greatly improved during They are located in noressible places and have an immense banner stretched across the street to draw attention. I saw many strangers in these places every time I went in and their registers of names foot up long lists daily. I would recommend, if possible, to have a more convenient place for our exhibit and to add to the present exhibit of fruit all the other products of the country. The three great questions in fruit growing for our consideration are: what to plant, how to grow, and how to market. The greatest drawbacks in California have been lack of water and failure in selection of stock and proper varieties. Too much 'boom' that made people cut up their orchards into town lots and neglect their nursage.

Any stockholder of this company shall be draw attention. I saw many strangers and proper varieties. Too much 'boom' that made people cut up their orchards into town lots and neglect their nurseries, and worst of all, want of proper care of their orchards. And this latter fault, whether from lack of coin, ignorance or indolence, has also been the fault in this valley, and it has been caused here largely by the speculative feeling causing people to attempt to do more than their resources would carry through. A small tract properly planted and cared for will pay more than four times the area neglected, and when one acre has been made to pay it enconrages and leads the way to put out more. That is the way many of the orchards in California have been started.
"We have many advantages over California in earliness and lateness of crops; freedom from scale and insect pests; and more than all the advantage of her experience. I think from my experience here in Salt River Valley, and my observations in California, that we can make no mistake in planting peaches, apricots, plums, grapes, figs, oranges and dives of the right varieties. Let us now proceed with whatever dis-cussions may seem relevent to these

Mr. Pemberton was then called upon and gave his experience as a merchant in Chicago, in handling California fruits and closed by saying that he thought there should be concerted action on the part of the fruit growers, and that they should decide upon certain varieties that have been demonstrated as the most successful and profitable and all put out the same kinds so that carload lots can be had for shipment. The system of shipping large lots of fruit to the cast to be sold at auction and on commission was now becoming general and is creating an almost inexhaustible market. We can do nothing unless we have enough of each variety

The discussion was continued by LIVERY, SALE AND FEED STABLE Messrs. Fowler, Turner, Farrington and Millay, upon special varieties, including the plum, apricot and fig, considerable information being elicited from each speaker. The prevailing opinion seemed to be that as yet the plum had not been proven a success here, except the Kelsey, and that is not a shipper. The apricot seems to be a favorite also the grape, but considerable discussion will still be necessary in order to reach full conclusions. Information is urgently solicited regarding the results of experiments on the various fruits of the valley. Let every one in the valley who has had any experience with any particular class or variety of fruit address a letter to THE REPUBLICAN and give the facts to

On motion of W. J. Murphy a com-mittee consisting of Messrs. Fowler, Deveranx and Pemberton were appointed to get farther information as to results already obtained and as to adaptability of soils to various fruits. The meeting then adjourned till Saturday, November 29, at 2 o'clock, at the City Hall.
